 The lashing billows make a long report,
 And beat her sides. Dryden's Ceyx and Alcy.
 REPO'RT. n. f. [from report.] Relater; one that gives an account.
 There she appear'd; or my reporter devis'd well for her. Shakefp. Antony and Cleopatra.
 Rumours were raised of great discord among the nobility; for this cause the lords assembled, gave order to apprehend the reporters of these fumes. Hayward.
 If I had known a thing they concealed, I should never be the reporter of it. Pope.
 REPORTINGLY. adv. [from reporting.] By common fame.
 Others say thou dost deserve; and I
 Believe it better than reportingly. Shakefp.
 REPO'RAL. n. f. [from repose.] The act of reposing.
 Dost thou think
 If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
 Of any truth, virtue, or worth in thee,
 Make thy words faith'd. Shakefp. King Lear.
 To REPOSE. v. a. [repono, Lat.]
 1. To lay to rest.
 Rome's readiest champions, repose you here,
 Secure from worldly chances and mishaps;
 Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells. Shakefp.
 I will repose myself with her; to live with her hath no sorrow, but mirth. Wisdom viii. 16.
 Have ye chos'n this place,
 After the toil of battle, to repose
 Your wearied virtue. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. i.
 2. To place as in confidence or trust.
 I repose upon your management, what is dearest to me, my fame. Dryden's Preface to Ann. Mirab.
 That prince was conscious of his own integrity in the service of God, and relied on this as a sure foundation for that trust he reposed in him, to deliver him out of all his distresses. Rogers's Sermons.
 3. To lodge; to lay up.
 Pebbles, reposed in those cliffs amongst the earth, being not so dissoluble and likewise more bulky, are left behind. Woodward's Natural History.
 To REPOSE. v. n. [reposer, Fr.]
 1. To sleep; to be at rest.
 Within a thicket I repos'd; when round
 I ruff'd up fall'n leaves in heap; and found,
 Let fall from heaven, a sleep interminate. Chapman.
 2. To rest in confidence.
 And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,
 I do desire thy worthy company,
 Upon whose faith and honour I repose. Shakefp.
 REPOSE. n. f. [repos, Fr.]
 1. Sleep; rest; quiet.
 Merciful powers!
 Refrain in me the cur'd thoughts, that nature
 Gives way to in repose. Shakefp. Macbeth.

REP

- TH' hour
 Of night, and of all things now retir'd to rest,
 Mind us of like repose. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. iv.
 Thoughtful of thy gain, I all the livelong day
 Consume in meditation deep, recluse
 From human converse; nor at thut of eve
 Enjoy repose. Philips.
 2. Cause of rest.
 After great lights must be great shadows, which we call repose; because in reality the light would be tired, if attracted by a continuity of glittering objects. Dryden's Dufresne.
 REPOSEDNESS. n. f. [from reposed.] State of being at rest.
 To REPOSITE. v. a. [repositus, Lat.] To lay up; to lodge as in a place of safety.

 REPOSITION. n. f. [from repositus.] The act of replacing.
 Being fastidied in the reposition of the bone, take care to keep it so by deligation. Wiseham's Surgery.
 REPOSITORY. n. f. [repositus, Fr. repositum, Lat.] A place where any thing is safely laid up.
 The mind of man, not being capable of having many ideas under view at once, it was necessary to have a repository to lay up those ideas. Locke.
 He can take a body to pieces, and dispose of them, to us not without the appearance of irretrievable confusion, but with respect to his own knowledge into the most regular and methodical repositories. Rogers's Sermons.
 To REPOSESS. v. a. [re and possess.] To possess again.
 How comes it now, that almost all that realm is repossessed of them? Stenjer's State of Ireland.
 Her suit is now to repossess those lands,
 Which we in justice cannot well deny. Shakefp.
 Nor shall my father repossess the land,
 The father's fortune never to return. Pope's Odyssey.
 To REPREHEND. v. a. [reprehendo, Lat.]
 1. To reprove; to chide.
 All as before his fight, whose presence to offend with any the least unbecomings, we would be sure as loth as they, who most reprehend or deride that we do. Hooker, b. v. f. 29.
 Pardon me for reprehending thee,
 For thou hast done a charitable deed. Shakefp.
 They, like dumb statues star'd;
 Which, when I saw, I reprehended them;
 And ask'd the mayor, what meant this wilful silence? Sh.
 2. To blame; to censure.
 I nor advise, nor reprehend the choice
 Of Marley-hill. Philips.
 Friends reprehend him there;
 For what? for healing Gaffer Cap's gray mare. Gay.
 3. To detect of fallacy.
 This colour will be reprehended or encountered, by impugning to all excellencies in compositions a kind of poverty. Bacon.
 4. To charge with as a fault.
 With of before the crime.
 Aristippus, being reprehended of luxury by one that was not rich, for that he gave six crowns for a small fish, answered, why, what would you have given? the other said, some twelve pence: Aristippus laid again, and six crowns is no more with me. Bacon's Apophthegms.
 REPREHENDER. n. f. [from reprehend.] Blamer; censurer.
 These fervent reprehenders of things, established by publick authority, are always confident and bold-spirited men; but their confidence for the most part riseth from too much credit given to their own wits, for which cause they are seldom free from errors. Hooker's Dedicacion.
 REPREHENSIBLE. adj. [reprehensibilis, Fr. reprehensibilis, Lat.] Blameable; culpable; censurable.
 REPREHENSIBLENESS. n. f. [from reprehensibilis.] Blameable-ness.

 2. Bearing the character or power of another.
 This council of four hundred was chosen, one hundred out of each tribe, and seems to have been a body representative of the people; though the people collectively relieved a share of power. Swift.
 REPRESENTATIVE. n. f.
 1. One exhibiting the likeness of another.
 A statue of rumour whispering an idiot in the ear, who was the representative of credulity. Addison's Freeholder.
 2. One exercising the vicarious power given by another.
 I wish the welfare of my country; and my morals and politics teach me to leave all that to be adjusted by our representatives above, and to divine providence. Blount to Pope.
 3. That by which any thing is shown.
 Difficulty must cumber this doctrine, which supposes that the perfections of God are the representatives to us, of whatever we perceive in the creatures. Locke.
 REPRESENTER. n. f. [from represent.]
 1. One who shows or exhibits.
 Where the real works of nature, or veritable acts of story, are to be described, art, being but the imitator or secondary representatives, must not vary from the verity. Brown.
 2. One who bears a vicarious character; one who acts for another by deputation.
 My muse officious ventures
 On the nation's representatives. Swift.
 REPRESENTMENT. n. f. [from represent.] Image or idea proposed, as exhibiting the likeness of something.
 When it is blessed, some believe it to be the natural body of Christ; others, the blessings of Christ, his passion in representation, and his grace in real exhibition. Taylor.
 We have met with some, whose reals made good their representations. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 To REPRESS. v. a. [repressus, Lat. represser, Fr.]
 1. To crush; to put down; to subdue.
 Discontents and ill blood having used always to repress and appear in person, he was loth they should find him beyond sea. Bacon's Henry VII.
 Some, taking dangers to be the only remedy against dangers, endeavour'd to set up the sedition again, but they were speedily repressed, and thereby the sedition suppressed wholly. Hayward.
 Such kings
 Favour the innocent, repress the bold,
 And, while they flourish, make an age of gold. Waller.
 How can I
 Repress the horror of my thoughts, which fly
 The sad remembrance. Denham.
 Thus long succeeding criticks justly reign'd,
 Licence repress'd, and useful laws ordain'd:
 Learning and Rome alike in empire grew.
 Armies stretch, repressing here
 The frantick Alexander of the North. Thomson.
 2. To compress. Not proper.
 REPRESS. n. f. [from the verb.] Repression; act of crushing.
 Not in use.
 Loud outcries of injury, when they tend nothing to the repress of it, is a liberty rather assumed by rage and impatience, than authorised by justice. Government of the Tongue.
 REPRESENT. n. f. [from represent.] Act of representing.
 No declaration from myself could take place, for the due representation of these tumults. King Charles.
 REPRESENTIVE. adj. [from represent.] Having power to repress; acting to repress.
 To REPRESENTIVE. v. a. [representative, Fr.] To respite after sentence of death; to give a respite.
